Poetry.

The following are touching and beautiful lines. They send a thrill deep into the heart.

Mother! watch the little feet Climbing o'er the garden wall, Bounding through the busy street, Ranging cellar, shed and hall;

Never count the moments lost; Never mind the time it costs, Little feet will go astray; Guide them, mother, while you may.

Mother! watch the little hand Picking berries by the way, Making houses in the sand, Tossing up the fragrant hay;

Never dare the question ask, "Why to me this heavy task?" These same little hands may prove Messengers of light and love.

Mother! watch the little tongue Prattling eloquent and wild; What is said and what is sung By the happy, joyous child;

Catch the word while yet unspoken, Subtle now while yet unspoken, This same tongue may yet proclaim Blessings in the Savior's name.

Mother! watch that little heart, Beating so fast and warm and true; Wholesome lessons now impart, Keep old, keep that young heart true;

Extricate every weed, Sowing good and precious seed; Harvest rich you then may see Ripening for eternity.

REV. ANTHONY BEWLEY.
The public prints throughout the Union have chronicled the fact that recently, in Texas, a Methodist minister was killed by a mob of lawless mob and hung. This diabolical has excited very little remark from the conductors of the religious press, and many of them seem to regard it as scarcely worthy of a passing comment.

A weekly paper which claims to be a loyal exponent of the usages of the Church of which the hanged man was a member, speaks of the deed as a grievously phrase, as if fearful that the mere mention of it might give offense "on the border," among those whose friendship it vainly seeks to perpetuate;

"we regret to learn" is a stereotyped phrase which might aptly introduce a notice of a lost carpet bag or tell the admiring public of an affection of the throat which disabled a brother of editor from preaching at a camp-meeting.

It seems rather tame language when with to express horror at the cold-blooded murder of a brother minister.
Language alittle more spirited in its tone would not have been unbecoming on such an occasion, even from editors who are bound to speak of "the great evil," and all things connected with it, in a calm, like tenderness. "They committed the deed and put the rope round the neck of the victim—may, even those who investigated this deed of blood—" might have said "we regret to learn that" the Rev. Anthony Bewley has been hung.

And who was Anthony Bewley? and why and by whom was this atrocity committed?

Anthony Bewley was an elder in good standing in the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was a member of the Arkansas Conference, and at their session in 1859 he was stationed at a place called Hamilton Valley in the Texas district.

He received that appointment from Bishop James, who, it will be remembered, published in this paper a calm account of the mob violence with which he and the conference generally were treated, at the instigation, as was supposed, of members of the Methodist Church, South. Mr. Bewley was elected a delegate to the General Conference in 1858, but for some reason unknown to us did not attend.

Of course he had no share in its proceedings. At the previous session of the Arkansas Conference, in '58, no bishop was present, and the members, by ballot, elected as their president (bishop pro tem.) the Rev. Anthony Bewley. At the conference of '55 Bishop Simpson appointed Mr. Bewley Presiding elder of the Texas district, and he was re-elected by appointment of Bishop Baker in '56, and of Bishop Ames in '57. We mention these facts to show in what esteem this hanged brother was held during the latter years of his life, both by his brethren and by the episcopacy. No man could have had in our Church a better endorsement as being, in the slang phrase of the day, "perfectly safe."

At the General Conference at Indianapolis, in '56, Brother Bewley was present as a delegate from the Arkansas Conference. He faithfully discharged every duty incumbent upon him, to the entire satisfaction of his brethren, who have seen, re-elected him to the same position four years afterward. All who had the pleasure of meeting Bro.
Bewley's acquaintance were struck with the modesty of his deportment and the unaffected simplicity of his character.

In his Church politics he was a conservative of the strictest pattern. He voted uniformly against any alteration of the Discipline on the subject of slavery.

All through session he shouldered to shoulder with the Border delin-guates. He was with Poissal and McClintock and Crooks, and against Hosmer and Mattison and Abel Stevens, on the great reckoning of votes on adopting the report of the Committee on Slavery.
(See the printed Journal for '56, page 127.)

It is due to the memory of our departed brother that these facts should be known, and the false insinuation that he was an Abolitionist should be branded as it deserves. But what was he? and how did he incur the malignant and deadly enmity of those among whom he had for so many years gone in and out preaching the unsearchable riches of Christ? We answer: Brother Bewley was a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and held, as does the entire Methodist Episcopal Church, that slavery is a great evil, and ought to be extirpated. In the providence of God, as we have seen, his lot was cast in a region where slaveholding is deemed right, and perfectly in accordance with the teachings of the Gospel. A branch of the nominal Church of Christ, which has blotted from its Discipline every semblance of hostility to slaveholding, exists in that section of the country.

Leading members of that nominal Church have avowed the determination to drive from that region all ministers who belong to what they call the Church North. They are encouraged in that object by professedly religious papers, Gentlemen of property lead on the rabble. Men of the same spirit as those who assaulted Bishop James in the house of God, and who needed but a little more encouragement to have hung him, officiated at the martyrdom of Bewley.

Of the Southern periodicals the New Orleans Christian Advocate is far from being the most intemperate in its language, and yet our readers will be shocked at perusing the following brief extract from a long article in the same spirit, which we find in a late number of that journal. Alluding to such men as Bewley and his colleagues, the editor says:

"These conspirators are the advance guard of that Black Republican party to which Dr. Abel Stevens professes to belong, and which the majority of Northern Methodists, it is said, will support in the ensuing presidential election."

This is the fruit of the doctrine taught by the entire Northern Methodist press, edited by such men as Drs. Thomas Kingsley, Haven, and Elliott, the latter in slaveholding territory. This is what is meant and desired by that "freedom of speech"—God save the mark!—and of the press, the absence of which in the South is vehemently complained of by the Independent, the Christian Advocate and Journal, and similar papers. It is for the emancipation of the South from Northern aggression, or the retiring of the Southern States from the Union.

That old and respectable organ of the Palmetto State counsels the people not to postpone their measures till after the inauguration of Lincoln, and the armed force of the North is at his disposal, as their action may then be too late. The same sentiment is uttered in Virginia.

A Georgia paper suggests the mode of bringing the revolution to a crisis. It advises that either South Carolina, Mississippi or Alabama should secede, and then if the central government at Washington should attempt to resist them, every Southern State would rally around them and then secession would become general, and a new Southern confederacy be formed immediately out of the broken Union. That Georgia will go with the seceders we are fully assured. That a large majority of the people of South Carolina, Mississippi and Alabama are prepared to take the decisive step of secession there is but too much reason to fear. The inflammatory materials are there, the train of gunpowder is laid, and it only requires that the match of incendiary, the torch of the Wide Awake, be applied
